The Department of Land Resource Management and Agricultural Technology (LARMAT) from July 30th to Aug 3rd 2018 hosted a visiting Professor Tomasz Pyrcz of the Institute of Zoology and Biomedical Research in Jagiellonian University in Krakow under the auspices of the 2018-2019 EU-ERASMUS+ Interuniversity Exchange Programme. The programme aims at initiating North-South cooperation between institutions of higher learning. University of Nairobi is cooperating with Jagiellonian University through staff and student mobility started during the spring term 2016/2017.

Prof. Tomasz gave lectures and discussions on “Biodiversity assessments” to undergraduate 4th year students from three programmes: Range Management, Management of Agro-ecosystems and Environment, and Land and Water Option of the BSc Agriculture. The teaching programme comprised a series of 5 lectures of 2h of duration each. Prof. Tomasz is being hosted by Dr. Stephen Mureithi and Dr Judith Mbau who are the Co-coordinators responsible of the ERASMUS+ Mobility

Programme for the University of Nairobi.

The students were very pleased with the Lectures given by Prof. Tomasz as indicated by the discussions and questions raised during the sessions. One of them reported that “The lectures were very informative and motivating”. For more information about the University of Nairobi visit <http://www.uonbi.ac.ke>.
